Package Diagram X3Profiling

The way we have divided X3Profiler into different packages is to increase flexibility. Primarily, we have aimed for separating the design of X3Profiler from any particular GUI. This, however, is rather difficult given the nature of our project. As we can see, Project in itself is composed of each individual class that holds information with regards to the profiling of a program. Put together, they contain everything that is needed to generate a visual display of such information, and hence why it is the line separating the GUI and the Project.
